

Dear Colleague,

Some of you will know that, at the end of this academic year, I retire from The British School in The Netherlands after seven very fulfilling years as CEO and Principal. I inherited a school in great shape. There have been many developments during my tenure and, I believe, I leave the school in the same excellent condition – allowing my eventual successor the privilege of leading one of the largest and most successful international schools in Europe.

The post offers many positive opportunities and challenges. Further details are at the following link:

Do take a look if you have any interest in moving on from your present role, or draw the vacancy to the attention of any colleague who you think might be a suitable candidate. You are, of course, welcome to contact me in confidence if you would like to know more. It really is a fantastic opportunity!

My best wishes,

Dr M.J.Coles
